

A very important element of the success of Policy Governance is the dialogue that can be created by following the principles. Good governance is about translating values into results, and to be able to have a meaningful conversation about values, we need to engage in dialogue.

In this contribution, I explore why Policy Governance and dialogue are so interconnected.